Usage Guidelines. The ipv6 access-class command is similar to the access-class command, except that it is IPv6-specific.. Identical restrictions should be set on all the virtual terminal lines because a user can connect to any of them. The incoming connection source address is used to match against the access list source prefix.

The Cisco ASA firewall uses access-lists that are similar to the ones on IOS routers and switches. If you have no idea how access-lists work then it's best to read my introduction to access-lists first.. Without any access-lists, the ASA will allow traffic from a higher security level to a lower security level. All other traffic is dropped.
