Software deployment is all of the activities that make a software system available for use.. The general deployment process consists of several interrelated activities with possible transitions between them. These activities can occur at the producer side or at the consumer side or both. Because every software system is unique, the precise processes or procedures within each activity can ...

In Exchange 2016 only a single role is used, the Mailbox role. This contains all necessary components required. Our example organization is Goodman Industries, who have a single Exchange 2010 multi-role server and will migrate over to a single Exchange 2016 mailbox server.. Figure 1: An overview of our topology In the example above, you'll see our source server EX1401 running Exchange 2010.
