The lines of the staff let you see the pitch of the notes from high to low, like a grid. In notation view, GarageBand always shows two staves, similar to piano notation. This shows a range of three octaves with middle C in the center (between the two staves). Most instruments and voices except the lowest bass instruments fall in this range.

GarageBand Tips and Tricks: Notation View:

GarageBand features a grid that makes it easy to align regions with beats and measures in the beat ruler, and with other musical note values. When you turn on the grid, the playhead, regions, and other items in the timeline snap to the nearest grid position in the timeline and the editor when you move or resize them. To turn the grid on or off:
