INTRODUCTION. The most frequent and important complication of peritoneal dialysis catheters is infection, which may result in catheter loss and discontinuation of peritoneal dialysis []. However, some evidence suggests that the transfer to hemodialysis for these reasons may be decreasing.

Noninfectious complications of peritoneal dialysis ...

Genital and anterior wall edema are distressful complications for peritoneal dialysis patients. Despite its decreasing incidence over the years, approximately 10% of peritoneal dialysis patients may experience labial, scrotal and penile edema. According to evidence it appears that female patients have considerably lower incidence of this complication when compared to men.

Rationale for Kt/V as a marker of dialysis adequacy. K (clearance) multiplied by t (time) is a volume (since $\text{mL}/\text{min} \times \text{min} = \text{mL}$, or $\text{L}/\text{h} \times \text{h} = \text{L}$), and $(K \times t)$ can be thought of as the mL or L of fluid (blood in this case) cleared of urea (or any other solute) during the course of a single treatment. V also is a volume, expressed in mL or L. So the ratio of $K \times t / V$ is a so-called ...

Hemodialysis, also spelled haemodialysis, or simply dialysis, is a process of purifying the blood of a person whose kidneys are not working normally. This type of dialysis achieves the extracorporeal removal of waste products such as creatinine and urea and free water from the blood when the kidneys are in a state of kidney failure. Hemodialysis is one of three renal replacement therapies (the ...
