In fluid dynamics, turbulence kinetic energy (TKE) is the mean kinetic energy per unit mass associated with eddies in turbulent flow. Physically, the turbulence kinetic energy is characterised by measured root-mean-square (RMS) velocity fluctuations. In Reynolds-averaged Navier Stokes equations, the turbulence kinetic energy can be calculated based on the closure method, i.e. a turbulence model.

A kinetic energy recovery system (often known simply as KERS) is an automotive system for recovering a moving vehicle's kinetic energy under braking. The recovered energy is stored in a reservoir (for example a flywheel or high voltage batteries) for later use under acceleration. Examples include complex high end systems such as the Zytek, Flybrid, Torotrak and Xtrac used in Formula One racing ...

Application of BIM in BEM offers multiple benefits as illustrated in Fig. 2. Contributions of BIM in energy-related modeling, simulations, and information is mainly about the ease of handling data, which can lead to automation in energy modeling, better presentation of output, capability of storing and organizing new building data especially the real-time information to have an up-to-date ...

Heat capacity The amount of internal kinetic energy stored in a material can be referred to as its heat capacity. This isn't the same thing as temperature, which is the average molecular kinetic energy within the material.
