No Fond Return Of Love

Barbara Pym wrote six novels between 1950 and 1961, ending with No Fond Return of Love. Then reading trends changed and publishers stopped being interested in her. She had a resurgence in the late 1970s when the Times Literary Supplement named her as one of the most underrated novelists of the century.

Women were often able to arrange things that men would have found impossible. In No Fond Return of Love, Dulcie Mainwaring is tall, in her early 30s and pleasantly attractive. She is given to wearing tweed suits and sensible shoes and is inordinately fond of Ovaltine: 'Life's problems,' she thinks, 'are often eased by hot, milky drinks.'
