The Journal-keeping Methods of Lewis and Clark. Clark's last entry is a reminder that "wrighting &c." was one of the principal tasks of the captains, and one that they thoroughly fulfilled. As Donald Jackson has observed, Lewis and Clark were "the writingest explorers of their time. They wrote constantly and abundantly, afloat and ashore, legibly and illegibly, and always with an urgent sense ...

E ventually one of the Corps of Discovery's most famous veterans, John Colter joined the expedition early, became one of its most useful hands, left it early, and yet did not get home until nearly four years after it ended. His permanent role as an icon of Western American history came from his adventures as a fur trapper between the summer of 1806 and the spring of 1810.

At AWP 2012, many friendly folks stopped by our table to say hello and to chat. More than once, someone leaned in close as if about to tell me a secret. "I have a problem," this person would say. "Yes?" I would say, cautious, bracing myself for an earful of personal woes. "I can't find any journals ...
