KILLOLOGY, (n): The scholarly study of the destructive act, just as sexology is the scholarly study of the procreative act. In particular, killology focuses on the reactions of healthy people in killing circumstances (such as police and military in combat) and the factors that enable and restrain killing in these situations.

Behavior is the functional component of evolutionary change. How well an animal runs is the selective force, not its legs. Paleontologists study the evolution of hard parts because those are what fossilize. Studying changes in femur lengths, however, leads to the misconception that it is legs that evolved, rather than running or jumping.

Biologic Bases of Behavior of Domestic Dog Breeds

Just like their LGD cousins, (the Great Pyrenees from France, the Komondor and Kavaszi from Hungary and the Anatolian and Akbash from Turkey, and the Tibetan Mastiff from Tibet,) the Maremma Sheepdog works around the clock to assure his flock remains safe from predators, primarily wolves and other local carnivores, but also those two legged burglars. ...
