Social Psychology Gilovich 3rd Edition

In social psychology, social loafing is the phenomenon of a person exerting less effort to achieve a goal when he or she works in a group than when working alone. This is seen as one of the main reasons groups are sometimes less productive than the combined performance of their members working as individuals, but should be distinguished from the accidental coordination problems that groups ...

We all suffer from systematic thinking errors 1, 2 which fall into three main types: (1) internal cognitive errors; (2) errors of emotion 3, perception and memory; and (3) social errors that result from the way we communicate ideas and the effects of traditions and dogmas. Some of the most common errors are the misperception of random events as evidence that backs up our beliefs, the habitual ...

Cognitive biases are systematic patterns of deviation from norm or rationality in judgment, and are often studied in psychology and behavioral economics.. Although the reality of these biases is confirmed by replicable research, there are often controversies about how to classify these biases or how to explain them. Some are effects of information-processing rules (i.e., mental shortcuts ...

1. This text begins with a discussion of how the interactions between our left and right hemispheres can raise philosophical concerns and question the idea of free will. We then discuss split-brain patients and the implications that dual-personality phenomenon have for those who stand by a soul-orientated theory of spirituality.. The philosopher Thomas Gilovich explains studies where two ...
