Mindfulness can change the structure of your brain. This process is called mindfulness. If you are spending a great time in nature on the weekend with your friend, you could observe your thoughts and become conscious whenever your thoughts slip to the pile of work which awaits you on Monday. Once you become conscious of those undesired thoughts, you can bring your focus back to the present moment.

Your brain is subject to “surprising performance limitations.” You can think at your highest levels for only limited periods of time. To make decisions or solve problems, you depend mainly on your powerful prefrontal cortex. However, the prefrontal cortex is a little like Goldilocks: For it to work well, everything has to be just right.
