The word malapropism comes from a character named Mrs. Malaprop in the 1775 play The Rivals, by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. Mrs. Malaprop was a humorous character in the play who often used incorrect words in her dialogue. Sheridan likely took that name from the French phrase mal à propos, which means "poorly placed." Lord Byron was the first to use the definition of malapropism officially in ...

In Greek mythology the Nephelae were the Oceanid-nymphs of clouds and rain. They arose from the earth-encircling river Oceanus bearing water in cloudy pitchers. Nephelae fed the streams of their River-God brothers with rain and nourished the earth. They were depicted as beautiful, young women pouring water from pitchers--like their Naiad sisters--or as women flitting across the sky in ...

The achievement of Christopher Marlowe, poet and dramatist, was enormous—surpassed only by that of his exact contemporary, Shakespeare. A few months the elder, Marlowe was usually the leader, although Shakespeare was able to bring his art to a higher perfection. Most dramatic poets of the sixteenth century followed where Marlowe had led, especially in their use of language and the blank ...

Born on 25 January 1759 in Alloway, Scotland, to William and Agnes Brown Burnes, Robert Burns followed his father's example by becoming a tenant farmer. Unlike William Burnes, however, Burns was able to escape the vicissitudes and vagaries of the soil in two ways: toward the end of his life he became an excise collector in Dumfries, where he died in 1796; and throughout his life he was a ...

Rose Hartwick Thorpe and 'The Chertsey Curfew' According to the original inscription, my copy of Curfew Must Not Ring To-night, by Rose Hartwick Thorpe, dates from before 1896. It was given as a present to my grandmother from her mother in March 1912, and along with her copy of Hans Andersen's Fairy Tales it provided some of the outlines for my earliest literary 'mental maps'.

Socrates - ADEIMANTUS Such then, I said, are our principles of theology --some tales are to be told, and others are not to be told to our disciples from their youth upwards, if we mean them to honour the gods and their parents, and to value friendship with one another. Yes; and I think that our principles are right, he said. But if they are to be courageous, must they not learn other lessons ...
