Give it to Me Straight! This activity works well as an extension of the previous exercise and is basically an inversion of Show, Don't Tell! In this exercise students must take a few sentences of inference and translate them into explicit statements.

Teaching Inference — Literacy Ideas

A couple of years ago I wrote about the best photography books by asking 30 professional photographers which books helped them improve both in their art and in their business. For 2019, I wanted to dig deeper on the vast topic of photography books by asking over 600 top photographers the same two questions: What books have helped you improve your photography and what books have helped you grow ...

Segmenting video content into events provides semantic structures for indexing, retrieval, and summarization. Since motion cues are not available in continuous photo-streams, and annotations in lifelogging are scarce and costly, the frames are usually clustered into events by comparing the visual features between them in an unsupervised way.

Stepping Up Our Game: Re-focusing the Security Community on Defense and Making Security Work for Everyone. Since the first Black Hat conference 20 years ago, the security community, industry and the world have changed to the point that it's time to re-examine whether we're living up to our responsibilities and potential.

Conspiracies, Hoaxes and Denials: It's just what they want you to believe! General distrust of authority and established facts; a desire to have someone or something in control; or feeling in control and superior by imagining that you're in the know, when really you have fallen for anomaly hunting, confirmation bias and logical fallacies.

The strength of inference regarding the presence or magnitude of risk effects is contingent upon the focal measure of predation risk and its mechanistic association with the response of prey (Ford and Goheen, 2015). Moll et al. (2017) classified measures of predation risk into three broad categories: risky places, risky times, and habitat characteristics.
